Muir S. Fairchild Research Information Center

Muir S. Fairchild Research Information Center (MSFRIC), formerly known as Air University (AU) Library, is the premier library in the Department of Defense.

We connect the United States Air Force professional to authoritative and relevant information resources through knowledgeable experts and tailored library tools.

Each AU college is assigned a professional librarian who is responsible for compiling bibliographies, assisting students, and serving as a subject/regional specialist.

We offer a well-balanced collection of over 2.6 million items, 63 databases, 20 computer workstations, a wireless network, E-books, audiobooks, videos, and maps.

Our library has strengthened its Cultural Awareness and Language collection, which includes language study guides, CD/DVDs, and online study tools.

Frequently Asked Questions

Does the library have a web site?

Yes! <http://www.au.af.mil/au/aul/lane.htm> or access the site through the AF Portal's library link.

I'm interested in a topic. Where should I begin?

Look through our extensive list of bibliographies, which contain electronic and print sources on specific topics, regions, and people. For further help, contact a subject specialist, or e-mail more general questions via the "Ask a Question" link. All three methods are accessible from the home page. You can call the reference desk at (334) 953-2888 or DSN 493-2888.

I'm a distance learning student. Is material available to me?

You have your own link on our home page to help you find information. If you need to borrow MSFRIC resources, our Interlibrary Loan Department works in conjunction with your local base or public library to share books, documents, and journal articles.
