Summary

On June 24, 2005, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad won the presidency of Iran, in a run-off against the former president Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, where he also became the first non-cleric president in 24 years. This report covers his background; his victory over a well-known former president Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani; and his confrontational remarks about the West including Israel. For further information and analysis on Ahmadinejad, Iran, and U.S. options, see CRS Report RL32048, Iran: U.S. Concerns and Policy Responses, by Kenneth Katzman. This report will be updated as warranted.

Background

Iranian president Mahmoud Ahmadinejad (pronounced mah-MOOD ah-mah-dih-nee-ZHAHD) was born in 1956 in the town of Garmsar, southeast of Tehran. The fourth son of seven children of an ironworker, he and his family moved to Tehran for better economic opportunity. Their move to Tehran coincided with the change of his family name. His family's original name was Saborjhian.<sup>1</sup> According to some, the family name change provides an insight into the devoutly Islamic working-class roots of Mr. Ahmadinejad's brand of populist politics. His solidarity with the most downtrodden is also believed to have been influenced by his father, Ahmad, who, after running a grocery store and then a barber shop in Aradan, became a blacksmith in Tehran.

Ahmadinejad holds a Ph.D. in traffic and transport engineering from Tehran University of Science and Technology. He later became a lecturer at the university. He <sup>1</sup> The name Saborjhian derives from thread painter-Sabor in Farsi- a once common and humble occupation in the carpet industry in Semnan province, where Aradan is situated. Ahmad by contrast is a name also used for prophet Muhammad and means virtuous; Nejad means race in Farsi, so Ahmedinejad can mean Muhammad's race or virtuous race. joined the revolutionary guards in 1986 after volunteering to serve in the war with Iraq. Reportedly, his Islamic credentials are said to be beyond challenge. He was co-founder of the Islamic Society of Students and has been an instructor for the Basij, the youth volunteer organization that enforces the Islamic Republic's strict religious mores.<sup>2</sup> In the 1980s, he reportedly served as a governor of Maku and Khoy cities in the northwestern West Azerbaijan province for four years. He became an advisor to the governor general of the western province of Kurdistan for two years.<sup>3</sup> In 1993, he was appointed as a governor general of the newly created northwestern province of Ardebil.

In May 2003, the Tehran City Council (TCC), which was dominated by conservatives when reformist voters did not turn out in large numbers in 2003 municipal elections, appointed Ahmadinejad mayor of Tehran, Iran's capital city of 12 million people. As mayor, he sought to improve local services, repair roads, and upgrade a chaotic traffic system. A former military figure, he also promised to step up efforts to counter western "decadence" within Iran's Islamic society, and converted some municipal buildings to religious instruction sites. As mayor, he developed a reputation for incorruptibility, personal piety, and attentiveness to the needs of Tehran's lower class.

Election and its aftermath

Prior to his 2005 election to presidency, Ahmadinejad never held an elected office and was virtually unknown in the international arena. Nevertheless, in a campaign promising anti-corruption, more economic support to the poor, and maintaining the principles of the revolution espoused by the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Ahmadinejad won the presidency in a run-off against former president Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani on June 24, 2005. Ahmadinejad then became the first non-cleric president of Iran in 24 years.

Ahmadinejad's rise to power and landslide victory surprised the international community including many Iranian specialists who anticipated a Rafsanjani victory. Approximately 22 million people voted in the run-off poll, which had a turnout of 60%. He received around 62% of the vote, nearly twice that of his rival, Rafsanjani, who received 35.9% of the vote.

Under the Iranian constitution, the president is elected for a four-year term by direct vote of the people and his re-election for a successive term is permissible only once. For instance, Ayatollah Khameni, Hashemi Rafsanjani, and Khatami were all elected for two consecutive terms.

Ahmadinejad's Comments

President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad has made a series of remarks about Israel, Jews, and the Holocaust since he took office in 2005. His remarks as reported by the international media are as follows:

- 10/26/2005 Speaking to a student conference in Tehran in a speech entitled, “World without Zionism,” he said, “Some European countries insist on saying that during World War II, Hitler burned millions of Jews and put them in concentration camps. Any historian, commentator or scientist who doubts that is taken to prison or gets condemned ... Let’s assume what the Europeans say is true ... Let’s give some land to the Zionists in Europe or in Germany or Austria. They faced injustice in Europe, so why do the repercussions fall on the Palestinians?” Most Jews in Israel “have no roots in Palestine, but they are holding the destiny of Palestine in their hands and allow themselves to kill the Palestinian people.”<sup>4</sup>
- 12/08/2005 Speaking at a press conference on the sidelines of an anti-terrorism summit of Islamic leaders in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, he said: “Today, they have created a myth in the name of Holocaust and consider it to be above God, religion and the prophets ... If you (Europeans) committed this big crime, then why should the oppressed Palestinian nation pay the price? You have to pay the compensation yourself. This is our proposal: give a part of your own land in Europe, the United States, Canada or Alaska to them so that the Jews can establish their country.”<sup>5</sup> He also made the same comments on 12/14/05 at a speech in southeastern city of Zahedan.
- 4/24/2006 At a press conference in Tehran, he said: “Every German-born is indebted to the arrogant and greedy Zionists ... Sixty years after the war, why do the Palestinian people have to burn in the crimes of Zionists under the pretext of the Second World War?”<sup>6</sup>
- 4/27/2006 In a speech in the western Iranian town of Zanjan, he said: “This regime (Israel) will one day vanish.”<sup>7</sup>
- 5/11/2006 In a reference to Israel in a speech to students in Jakarta, given during a July-August 2006 conflict between Israel and Hezbollah, he said: “I advise them to pack up and move out of the region before being caught in the fire they have started in Lebanon.”<sup>8</sup>
- 7/29/2006 In a speech reacting to Israel’s offensive against Hezbollah, he said: “The real cure for the (Lebanon) conflict is elimination of the Zionist regime, but there should be first an immediate cease-fire.”<sup>9</sup>

- 8/03/2006 Speaking at an Islamic summit in Putrajaya, Malaysia, he said: “The Zionist regime is fraudulent and illegitimate and cannot survive.”<sup>10</sup>
- 10/19/2006 In a speech in Islamshahr, southwest of Tehran, he said: “This regime (Israel) will be gone, definitely. You (the Western powers) should know that any government that stands by the Zionist regime from now on will not see any result but the hatred of the people.”<sup>11</sup>
- 12/11/2006 At Ahmadinejad’s urging, the Institute for Political and International Studies, an arm of the Foreign Ministry, held a two-day conference entitled “Review of the Holocaust: Global Vision.” He addressed the conference as did other Holocaust deniers such as former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke and French professor Robert Faurisson; Nazi sympathizers; and anti-Zionists such as British Rabbi Ahron Cohen.
