

* Behavior patterns are of interest for two purposes. First, they offer insight into the other factors. Second, when aligned with intent, there is a high correlation to future behaviors. But behavior patterns are not a direct influence on future behaviors in the same sense that attitudes, perceptions or even cognitive style are direct influences.